P19

A steady start to the weekend. I could feel some nerves on the first few flying laps. The bike was in a good place after the test and it was all about getting up to speed quickly to try and make more improvements on the bike. Finishing in P19, but I knew there was lots of room for improvements for our Superpole session.

SUPERPOLE

P12

We took a bit of a gamble with a gearing and set up change for this session. Slightly longer on the gearing to keep the lap a little less busy, and a shorter wheelbase to help the bike with change of direction. It was very hot this afternoon with track temp near the 50 degree mark, meaning less grip and more slide. Finishing up the session in P12, I was happy with my lap time in the conditions we were in, with also a few mistakes on my fastest lap. I knew I had a bit more in the tank to give for race 1.

WARM UP 1

P9

First warm up session of the weekend and the goal was to practice some overtaking places in prep for the race. Finishing up in P9, matching my qualifying lap in cooler conditions was a good step. Still continuing on from what I learnt at our test at the track 2 weeks prior with braking and the deceleration phase of the corner, I was excited for race 1.

RACE 1

P8

Not the best of launches off the line but had good confidence going into turn 1! Managed to lose only 2 positions off a pretty poor launch, but made it quickly back on the first lap. In the time I was battling through to higher positions, a 1.7 second gap formed to the front group. I got my head down, set my PB laps over the weekend and bridged myself to the front. Amongst the battling, I got up to 6th place and tried to climb my way inside the top 5. A few costly mistakes stopped me from doing so, but I was happy with my performance and lap times in the race. Good enough to put me P4 on the grid for race 2!

WARM UP 2

P9

Another good session similar to our first. I set another good few laps on my own and practiced the overtaking for the race. I was focused on the most technical part of the circuit and trying different lines and braking patterns to see what worked well. Working on the weaknesses round the track, I looked forward to launching of the grid from my best position yet.

P8

A great launch off the line and I held position through the first sector. Climbing up the order being hard on the brakes into T3 and I was into 2nd by the first chicane. I had the goal of staying in the front group, but after a few costly mistakes and getting beaten up by riders behind, I missed my goal. Looking back on the race there are definitely new problems that we have discovered. We have the speed and pace, its now just fine tuning the last bits to consistently be competing for the podium positions!

Looking Ahead — CREMONA · ITALY

A test with the team this weekend will prove good track time and data before our round at the Italian circuit 2 weeks to come. Working on set up, gearing, lines and other techniques to ensure we arrive in the best place possible.
